Celebrity Carpenters in Japan

by OPC deacon & disaster response volunteer, Mark Palmer

The OPC Disaster Response ministry was in need of experienced carpenters to go to Japan. My wife, Patti, noticed on Facebook their request for help to rebuild after the typhoon in October, 2019. As I waited for others to volunteer, I wondered if any were waiting for the same reason that I did, so I signed up. In the end only one other man did volunteer with me. (He was not in the OPC or an experienced carpenter-- but still came to help.)

Woody Lauer (OPC missionary to Japan at the Nazomi Center) and his family were helpful in getting us started and in providing housing and translation.

We flew over and started work. "Open Doors of Japan" was heading up relief workers and it functioned as the coordinators of all the volunteers from Japan. We were Americans joining their organization. Once they heard that I had been to Japan seven years ago to rebuild after the tsunami, they were very impressed. (Extra bows!)

There were hundreds of houses needing new flooring. The typhoon had flooded the crawl spaces of homes with water and mud. Workers had already taken up the flooring to remove the mud and dry out the homes. We were the first ones to start putting back new flooring. (It is really just sub-flooring as thick grass mats that goes over it). It was also experimental as it was important to see how much we could do in a day. They had to have a plan to get flooring and...

Finish this story, read Mark's diary of the trip and see more photos on our website: opcdisasterresponse.org/celebritycarpenters/.
